Hello Parents,

Another busy and productive week has flown past! We have been working through great readings, videos on interesting subjects. It's been a good week.

Next week I look forward to more reading groups and what I hope will be some great book projects coming in (hint hint). The literacy groups are off to a great start...now we just need to make sure that books read are recorded in some type of report/project fashion.

We are in another Sumdog competition...so if you can help your kiddos by encouraging math work this weekend...that will help! The math games provide tons of great data on each student. It's interesting to see and track their progress through math games.

I hope to begin wrapping up the Minecraft Houses and slideshows in the next week. So many are flying through this project...I really enjoy the creative approaches and the work towards making a "real" looking home in Minecraft.

Make sure to check email and ClassDojo for Valentine's name lists. I believe we will do an exchange on either the 10th or on the 14th...still a little up in the air on deciding?!?
