Hi Families!

First, I just want to say THANK YOU so much, for all the kind cards and for everything this year!! Your support and welcomeness has meant the world to me. Your kids may tell you that I did in fact cry today, even though I said I wouldn't. But I couldn't help it, they've all had such a positive impact on my life and my confidence as a teacher. It's a bittersweet time, as I'm so proud of all the growth we've accomplished together this year, but I know it's going to be an incredibly difficult goodbye. I truly mean it when I say that each and everyone one of your children has made this the most wonderful experience, and I will never forget them! I will still be in as much as I can until graduation, so this isn't goodbye yet! But since this was my last official week, again, THANK YOU all for everything!! Here is a picture of the graduation stole they helped decorate today :)

Ms. Mann

Hello,

As you can see, there were some big feelings today. We are not celebrating that today is the last we will see Ms. Mann, but instead the milestone of her completing student teaching. Now she is just a little paperwork away from graduation...and her first classroom!!

We start the ILEARN next week with the ELA (English and Language Arts) sections. This will be spread out through all four days of next week with blocks of about 1-1.5 hours each day. We will repeat the same model the following week for the Math section. This is a busy time of year and one that always has the testing component overshadowing so much in 3rd grade. I do my best to keep things moving along mostly normally...not adding extra pressure to this test. It won't determine passing or failing the year, it won't really make a great difference in their lives. It will be something that these students will experience for the next 7-8 years of their schooling...unfortunately.

Here's to a great finish to a busy week. Everyone worked hard and completed work well. Next week is four days. It will be a whirlwind...so make sure your child gets good sleep and good food!
