Hello Parents,

I cannot believe this year has already begun! I am very excited about the class...so far they have been pretty great. I think it's going to be a really good year!

Next week there are a few administrative items coming up. #1 is the 3rd grade parent meeting on Thursday August 17th. This my chance to share a glimpse of what this year may look like. It's a 40 minute whirlwind presentation that'll make your head spin...try to be there!! #2 is the Parent Kick-Off coffee 8:45am to 9:45am.

We start a full week next week. That means stepping up the workload. Expect a little panic from your student...it's normal. This may result in a few students staying in from part of recess to complete work...this is normal as well. We all learn how to manage and organize our work in different ways. Sometimes this means hard lessons. It's all part of the learning curve.

We've already started with Code.org. A handful of students have had some experience, but we will move everyone along at their own pace and make sure they are being challenged and having fun. Soon we will begin CAD lessons to get ready for 3D printing.

Below see the link to Book Projects. These are similar in concept to the old school book reports many of us remember from school...but more fun. I want some type of proof that your child is reading....reading every night. Book projects are my accountability. We will discuss these more at the parent meeting.

BOOK PROJECTS:

There are 5 projects due each grading period. That means 5 due by October 11th.
