Hello Parents,

Another four day week flies by. We've been busy this week, and for the most part productive. We've focussed on the culture and history of Dia de los Muertos. This has been delivered via Google Classroom. There were read and response activities, a video quiz and a fun lesson on drawing sugar skulls.

The class has been working very hard on Project Ignite. I paired students with "experts" that have already completed their first 13 lessons. The goal is to push through the first 13 lessons and get to the initial printing project. I'd like to see everyone done with their medallions by next week.

I'm so grateful to the parents, room moms and volunteers for the fun fall party. It's always great to have a break and have fun. The class enjoyed the games and the snacks.

Next week we get back to a normal schedule. Monday remind your kiddo to bring their library books. I sent an invitation to be a guardian on Google Classroom. There are settings that should allow you to choose the frequency of updates and information. (<https://support.google.com/edu/classroom/answer/6388136?hl=en>) I am hoping to utilize Google Classroom for most weekly assignments and quizzes. With the guardian accounts you should get an email about the weekly assignments...communication is the key.

We are running a quick sprint through the next two weeks before Thanksgiving. We will be busy, but my real goal is to be productive...very productive. That includes reading/book projects at home (remember that 5 more are due by Dec. 21st). We will be working through a couple of TinkerCAD projects...

Have a WONDERFUL weekend...REST!!
