Hello Parents,

All the medallions are printed!! But I will be holding those that belong to the last few that are finishing Project Ignite. We have already started a second project and a couple challenges in TinkerCAD...and we now have a mini laser engraver. After building some shielding and a light filter it's up and running. I hope to purchase a couple more in the next week or two. The few that have created lasered items are excited. We are working on gifts and ornaments for all occasions. Too much fun.

Next week is our last full week before the Thanksgiving break. This is already a busy time...and with a very short week the following week we will be extra busy. This week has already been a major case of paying the piper...some of the online quizzes on ThatQuiz and elsewhere have been a little neglected.

I look forward to new projects and challenges across the next several weeks. Please watch for news and directions about new assignments and projects. Some will be school only, but many will have components that can be completed at home or via Google Classroom.

We are still in this quick sprint through the next week before Thanksgiving. We will be busy, but my real goal is to be productive...very productive. That includes reading/book projects at home (remember that 5 more are due by Dec. 21st). We will be working through a couple of TinkerCAD projects...and now LASER engraving projects

Have a WONDERFUL weekend...REST!!
