Hello Parents,

We have finished a busy yet productive week!! We've had a great week of work and fun. Our visit with Dr. French was great. He shared Zeno's Paradox and we discussed convergence tests for infinite series (<http://mathworld.wolfram.com/ZenosParadoxes.html>). This class never ceases to amaze me...they caught on right away and understood the infinite series and then the proof showing the series actually will converge. Discussing the mathematical elements of Zeno's paradox, infinite series and convergence and the visual connections to Gabriel's horn (http://www.rhurrell.com/images/gabe_graph.gif) was such a fun topic.

Next week will be another great and busy week! Ms. Moya and I are teaming up with some great lessons!! I'm looking forward to some good stuff!!! I also have some new MinecraftEDU work and a surprising tie to history.

We are in school on Monday. That was a snow day we used already...so now it's time to make it up. The next day off is April 27th...it's a Friday....unless we have another snow storm?!?!

This is the final nine weeks. It's going to get busy. Make sure to check the assignments link below, check with your student about assignments and projects. I will make sure to be my best about posting to the assignment page and to Google Classroom. If anyone is falling too far behind...expect an email reminder.

Round 4...the final round of the great book projects are due May 18th. They are due the last Friday before school is out. I will be offering SEVERAL creative and fun options to make these last five projects attainable to ALL. This is the final Friday before the year ends. <http://mrbrantley.weebly.com/book-projects.html>
