Hello Parents,

I cannot believe we are looking at the last full week of this school year. So much that I could say...

We are working this final week on finalizing grades, finishing projects (one last in class contest) and completing this year. The last three days are a whirlwind...so we will leave little for those days.

Next week we will hold the popsicle bridge contest. This has become an annual contest for teams in my classroom.

<https://mrbrantley.weebly.com/popsicle-bridge-contest.html> For the past four years this has been an exciting 5 day challenge. I will look forward to sharing the contest results and bridge successes and failures. We will test each bridge until they break...the one that holds the most weight wins!

We have many things to get cleaned up and packed up before this year concludes. I'm not having the class pack my stuff, but there are going to be a few rounds of bringing things home. This will clear our bins, desks and the last of the artwork from Mrs. Wilson.

Next week will probably seem a little light on the workload for the class. As we wind down I will be gathering grades from all subjects and getting report cards ready to go. There is precious little time left. Help your child take a look at ThatQuiz and finish up anything missing, get those last book projects in and remind them that school isn't over until 3:30 on the 23rd.

Round 4...the final round of the great book projects are due May 18th. They are due the last Friday before school is out. I will be offering SEVERAL creative and fun options to make these last five projects attainable to ALL. This is the final Friday before the year ends. <http://mrbrantley.weebly.com/book-projects.html>

BOOK PROJECTS:

There are 5 projects due each grading period. That means 5 due by March 9th.
