Hello Parents,

Another week is done...and most are sticking with the work and expectations. By now you should have received the E-Learning grading policy. This is intended to keep our students on task and honestly working. Throughout the school teachers are struggling with students that are not turning in assignments and falling behind. We are all doing our best to work through this time, but we also know that the learning process requires at least some work to make progress.

Ms. Brown will be formally concluding with us soon...Purdue is requesting all final paperwork and she is now needing to work on resume and applications. This will be a tough transition...I think the class and I both can't imagine this year without Ms. Brown.

I'm working on a couple fun projects now that everyone has their reading books and their math snake...yes, math snake. It'll make sense soon. We have some fun activities ahead. I re-issued the DIY Kite challenge. This is on Google Classroom and Flipgrid.

We are still in this for a few more weeks. May 15th is four weeks away...but with the M,W,F schedule that's actually only 12 days. Please help keep your child working and taking school seriously. I will adhere to the grading policy from my side. They only GRADED assignments will be reading, language arts/spelling and math...the extra that I share will have an optional...non-mandatory flavor. But as I look through assignments I will be putting grades into Google Classroom. That means you should be able to track missing assignments and what "counts" towards your child's fourth quarter grades.

The end is near...I hope that's the end of quarantine, fear, stress and the extreme separation too.

BOOK PROJECTS: 5 projects due 4th and FINAL grading period. 5 due by May 15th.
